

FINANCING YOUR Ed.M. EDUCATION

2012.2013

HARVARD
GRADUATE SCHOOL OF EDUCATION
Financial Aid Office

Congratulations!

Congratulations on being admitted to the Harvard Graduate School of Education! As an HGSE student, you will have the opportunity to study at the nexus of practice, policy, and research while preparing to become part of the next generation of leaders in education. Each day - from classrooms to boardrooms, in grass-roots community organizations and in the U.S. Department of Education - members of the HGSE community are making a difference. We in the Financial Aid Office have produced this guide to help you learn about financing options that can enable you to reach your professional goals.

Applicants are admitted to HGSE solely on the basis of academic potential. Over 75% of our students receive some form of financial assistance, with many applicants receiving grant support. We are proud to be one of the few leading schools of education committed to providing both merit-based and need-based scholarship programs.

We understand that choosing a school and financing a graduate education can be both an investment and a challenge, and our goal is to provide you with the opportunities, information, and assistance to make your goals a reality. We look forward to partnering with you in the time ahead and hope very much to meet you on Appian Way in the fall.

Sincerely,

Patty White

Financial Aid & You

The HGSE Financial Aid Office offers a number of financial aid programs to assist you in financing the cost of education. This publication is intended to familiarize you with the opportunities and services offered by the Financial Aid Office and to assist you in your financial planning. Our website is another important source for information – we invite you to refer to it regularly for information updates, commonly-used forms and the latest versions of this guidebook and other useful financial aid publications.

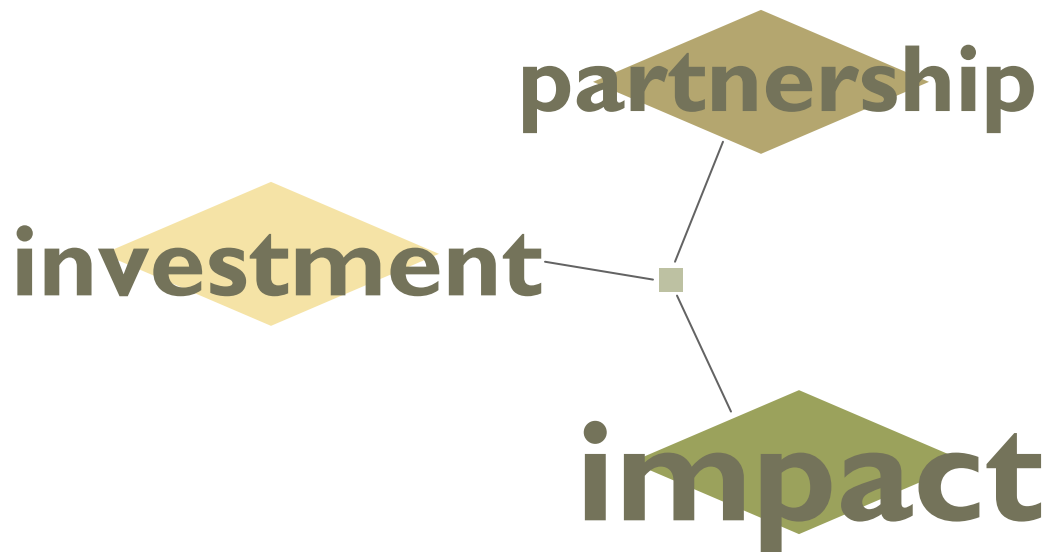

HGSE Ed.M. students receive funding from a variety of sources. Our aid programs include:

- Need-based grants and merit-based scholarships
- Federal loans that offer a number of deferment provisions, repayment options and forgiveness possibilities
- Employment opportunities including the Federal Work Study Program and Field Experience Program

While you plan to finance your time at HGSE, there are a few important points to remember:

- You are #1. You have the primary responsibility for your education. As a graduate student, careful financial planning is essential to your long term success at HGSE and beyond. In addition to the financial aid for which you may qualify, you must be prepared to contribute financially to your education through personal sources.
- Your education is an investment. Consider the potential return on that investment when making decisions about when and where to attend school. We encourage you to make the best decision for your individual situation.
- Don't be intimidated by financial matters. Using simple arithmetic and planning skills anyone can create a budget and spending plan. Doing this will help you make informed decisions and take the anxiety out of basic financial planning. Financial literacy is an important skill that can be continually developed and improved.

The Financial Aid Office is committed to working with you as you plan the financing of your graduate education. The financial aid staff is available as a resource to assist with many aspects of the planning process. We offer workshops and programs throughout the year and gladly welcome your suggestions for new topics.

How Much Does A Year At HGSE Cost?

The first step in financing your education is to understand the expenses you will need to meet. As a HGSE student, you will be enrolled for approximately 9 months, and the following cost estimates include actual tuition and fee amounts as well as estimates for living expenses and related educational expenses.

Living expense estimates are based on several data sources including Bureau of Labor Statistics consumer price index data, surveys of local area apartment rental rates, and student-reported living expense data. While the standard budget assumes a reasonable but modest lifestyle, our goal is to accommodate the living expenses of the majority of the HGSE student population.

- = fixed expenses
- = allowances that may vary individually (and should not be exceeded)

When creating your budget, note the only fixed expenses you will be charged are tuition and health insurance fees. In other words, expenses such as room & board and travel will vary from student to student. You may also have expenses that are not included in the student budget, like loan or credit card payments. These expenses are not considered educational expenses for financial aid purposes. Understand that you may need to trim expenses or increase resources in order to meet your actual budget expectations. You should use these estimates in developing a spending plan, because these are the expenses we use in assessing your aid eligibility and your total aid can not exceed the total student budget.

HGSE Cost Estimates for 2012-2013 (9 month full time academic year)
Tuition	$ 38,480
Health Insurance Fees	$ 3,098
Room & Board	$ 14,620
Books & Supplies	$ 1,576
Local Travel	$ 1,254
Misc. Personal Expenses	$ 3,540
Loan Fees	$ 204
Total Student Budget	$ 62,772

HEALTH INSURANCE FEES

Health insurance fees are composed of two separate fees. The first is a mandatory University Health Services Fee, which is $465 per semester in the 2012-2013 academic year. Massachusetts State Law requires that you have comprehensive medical insurance, so the second is a Blue Cross/Blue Shield Insurance Fee, which is $1,084 per semester during the 2012-2013 academic year. If you have comparable coverage from another source, the Blue Cross/Blue Shield Insurance Fee can be waived by submitting a waiver form and insurance documentation. You can visit the University Health Services Office website at www.huhs.harvard.edu or contact their Insurance Office at 617-495-2008 with any questions or to acquire a waiver form.

LIVING EXPENSES

We encourage students to carefully review the standard budget when planning for the year; worksheets at the end of this guide are provided to assist with financial planning. Even though students should budget accordingly, please realize that it is possible to spend less than the standard student budget amounts. For example, students who pay lower rental rates and/or cut down on personal expenses are able to live below the budget. Many students have found it possible to lower expenses by taking advantage of money saving tips such as those listed in the Student Financial Planning section of this guide. Please note that regardless of where you live or what your actual expenses are for each item, we can only use our standard estimates for considering your eligibility for all types of financial aid, including loans.

ADJUSTMENTS TO THE STUDENT BUDGET

Students who have additional non-discretionary expenses not included in the standard student budget (e.g. childcare expenses) should inform the Financial Aid Office in writing and include appropriate documentation as those expenses are incurred. While special circumstances may be taken into consideration, please note that it is extremely rare for the Financial Aid Office to increase the student budget for anything other than childcare expenses or the one-time purchase of a computer for use during the degree program. No adjustments can be made without detailed documentation.

Student Resources

Next, you must identify the resources available to you in meeting the expenses of your education. These resources can come from personal sources, financial aid, or other sources such as external scholarships and grants. Remember that you must identify enough total resources to meet your expected total expenses during the academic year.

Many Harvard students are successful in finding external sources of financial aid in the form of scholarships and grants. Most students take advantage of free online resources that offer scholarship searches. Others research external funding opportunities through employers, charitable organizations, religious affiliations and/or civic entities. In any case, the earlier you start your search the more success you will have in supplementing your resources with an outside scholarship or grant.

You can use this planning table to work out your expected expenses and resources. Keep in mind the standard student budget discussed in the previous section- your total financial aid (all grants, scholarships, educational loans, etc.) can not exceed the total cost estimate of $62,772.

YOUR EXPENSES		YOUR RESOURCES
Tuition and Fees	$	Income from work during academic year	$
Rent/Housing Charges	$	Savings and Personal Assets	$
Utilities	$	Other Financial Assistance from family, etc.	$
Food/Board	$	Scholarships & Grants from HGSE and/or outside sources	$
Transportation/Moving Costs	$	Loans	$
Books/Supplies/Computer	$	Other	$
Personal Expenses	$
Payments: Consumer Credit/Loans/Etc.	$
Medical/Dental/Health Expenses	$
Child Care	$
Other	$
TOTAL EXPENSES		TOTAL RESOURCES

If your total resources are greater than your total expenses, you have a strong start on financial planning for the academic year. If your total expenses are greater than resources you still have work to do. Consider cutting expenses as much as possible so your resources stretch farther or investigate additional strategies as described in the following pages.

How Is Aid Eligibility Determined?

Eligibility for federal student assistance programs is determined through a congressionally-mandated formula referred to as the Federal Methodology. Financial need assessments are based on your income (including spouse's income), assets, family size, number of family members in college, and other factors, taken from information you supplied on the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA).

In determining your eligibility for need-based HGSE Grant, the Financial Aid Office uses the same FAFSA information along with additional information submitted on your HGSE Financial Aid Application. The HGSE eligibility calculation assumes that you will use a portion of your available personal assets to meet your education expenses.

Following a careful analysis of the financial data you submitted, financial aid staff calculate an expected contribution from the student toward educational expenses. Your contribution is subtracted from the standard student budget (the estimated cost of attendance) and the remainder is considered your calculated financial need.

Special Circumstances: The financial aid staff is committed to working to perform a need analysis that is fair, equitable, and provides maximum benefit to students with the greatest need. If you have unique circumstances that cannot be readily documented on the standard application forms (e.g. extraordinary medical expenses, dependent care costs, etc.) you may submit a letter to the HGSE Financial Aid Office explaining your situation in detail. Including supporting documentation with your appeal is required.

What Types of Financial Aid Are Available?

Financial aid comes in multiple forms, and often these different types of aid are combined to help you meet your educational expenses. The Admissions Committee and various fellowship selection committees determine your competitiveness for merit awards which are based on your academic credentials, while the Financial Aid Office determines your eligibility for all available forms of federal and Harvard need-based awards.

FINANCIAL AID TYPES

FINANCIAL AID SOURCES

When your financial aid package is created you receive an award letter listing the types and sources of aid offered to you

It is important to pay close attention to all instructions when applying for admission and financial aid. Some merit based scholarships are included as part of the Admissions Application, and additional grants are included as part of the Financial Aid Application. In the following sections you can learn more about many of the specific awards that are managed by the HGSE Financial Aid Office.

Grants, Scholarships and Fellowships

These types of aid do not need to be repaid. They may be based on merit, need, or a combination of other factors. Grants, Scholarships and Fellowships also come from a variety of sources. They can come from HGSE, Harvard University, Federal or State Governments or private sources. Most of the time, these sources of aid are disbursed directly to your Harvard bill, and split evenly across the fall and spring terms.

Applications for merit based scholarships at HGSE are included on the Application for Admission, but others are offered separately across Harvard University. The Financial Aid Office lists these opportunities on our website and you can apply for awards provided by the Harvard Committee on General Scholarships by completing the "Restricted Scholarship Application" that is part of the HGSE Financial Aid Application.

HGSE need-based grants are determined by your financial aid application materials. These grants range up to $11,900 and are limited, so it is important to apply for aid on time to ensure maximum consideration for need-based grants. HGSE is unique among many of its peers in offering need-based grants, so if you don't receive a merit-based scholarship you may still qualify for some free aid!

visit the "Fellowships & Grants" section at www.gse.harvard.edu/financialaid for more details

Loan Programs

The majority of HGSE Ed.M. students borrow to help finance their studies, and both federal and supplemental loan programs are available. The Financial Aid Office will assess your eligibility for a Federal Perkins or Direct Unsubsidized Loan. You may receive a combination of these loan types depending on your eligibility. You may then borrow supplemental loans at your discretion if needed. All options must be considered carefully. If necessary, the entire cost of the program may be borrowed through federal student loans, with benefits such as income-based repayment and public service loan forgiveness for educators. You should try to borrow the minimum amount necessary to meet your expenses, keeping in mind that current borrowing encumbers future earnings. Repayment calculators can be found on our website and elsewhere on the internet; these tools can help you develop a wise borrowing strategy and plan for manageable repayment. Ed.M. students who graduated in 2011 accumulated average student loan debt of $30,900 while enrolled at HGSE, and 69% of graduating students borrowed loans while enrolled.

visit the "Student Loans" section at www.gse.harvard.edu/financialaid for more details about loan eligibility, borrowing limits, interest rates and repayment terms

Work Opportunities

Many students choose to work during their enrollment in order to meet expenses, and there are several options you may take advantage of in order to “earn while you learn”. You will find your academic program to be a rigorous one, and your studies will take priority while you are a student. However it is expected that all students will work during the academic year if they are able to, and you should assume a modest earnings potential during the academic year.

FEDERAL WORK STUDY PROGRAM

When applying for aid your eligibility will be considered for Federal Work Study (FWS) assuming you indicate your interest in this program on your FAFSA. FWS is a need-based employment program that is federally funded and offered to eligible U.S. citizens and permanent residents of the U.S. working for participating non-profit employers. You can reasonably expect to earn up to $5,000 per academic year through work study funding; the FWSP maximum hourly wage for graduate students during the 2011-2012 academic year was $18.15. Funding is limited so not all students may be awarded funds from this program.

HARVARD UNIVERSITY STUDENT EMPLOYMENT OFFICE

The Harvard University Student Employment Office (SEO) is an important resource for all Harvard students seeking employment during their studies. The SEO posts both on and off-campus job listings offering a wide range of work opportunities. To view these job postings, you may visit the SEO website at www.seo.harvard.edu.

FIELD EXPERIENCE PROGRAM

The Field Experience Program (FEP) allows you to design your own course, combining theory with practice. FEP internships provide students a chance to develop professional skills, shape research questions, explore careers, and establish new professional contacts while earning course credit. Each intern chooses a site, a field supervisor, and a HGSE faculty supervisor. The FEP office will select a teaching fellow that meets with the intern and ensures that the internship goals are met. Contact the HGSE FEP Office for more information on this program.

HGSE CAREER SERVICES OFFICE

The Career Services Office assists HGSE alumni and students in formulating career plans. The office serves as a resource and information center by offering current job listings, a career resource library, counseling sessions, as well as workshops on career planning and on job-search skills. In addition, the Career Services Office invites educational recruiters to campus, provides data on alumni career paths and salaries, coordinates the annual Career Day Programs, and coordinates student and alumni networks. For more information, visit the office's website at www.gse.harvard.edu/about/administration/careers/visit the "Student Work" section at www.gse.harvard.edu/financialaid for more details

External Sources of Funding

Many students are successful in securing external scholarships or grants to augment their financial aid packages, and we encourage you to pursue these opportunities

Most students take advantage of free online resources that offer scholarship searches. Be wary of any organization that charges a fee for their services, as they are likely scams. Others research external funding opportunities through employers, charitable organizations, religious affiliations and/or civic entities. Some common external funding sources utilized by HGSE students include AmeriCorps Awards and Veteran's Administration benefits.

If you receive an outside scholarship it will be added to your financial aid package. If your total aid exceeds the student budget, we will reduce your other aid, starting with the least favorable programs. Even small scholarships can help with your expenses, and there are often many offered throughout the school year.

Meeting the Gap

As you may realize, there is often a difference between the amount of aid offered to you and the estimated cost of attending HGSE. Meeting this gap requires additional financial preparation. If the planning table in the Student Resources section left you with a budget shortfall you may need to consider a range of options in order to meet your expenses. Aside from seeking external scholarships and grants, you may also consider utilizing a tuition payment plan, a supplemental education loan, or a combination of both. Remember that borrowing encumbers your future earnings, so approach supplemental borrowing carefully to avoid borrowing more than you might need.

visit the "Student Loans" section at www.gse.harvard.edu/financialaid for more details about supplemental loan options

Student Billing, Refunds & Tax Implications

STUDENT BILLS

Student bills must be paid in full before the beginning of each term (mid-August for the fall and mid-January for the spring) or, alternatively, in eight monthly installments over the course of the year. The monthly payment plan has an annual service fee of $70; detailed information is provided with the first bill in early July. You will see that some forms of aid (institutional grants, many loans, etc.) will be listed on your bill as “anticipated payments” towards your charges, with a bottom line amount due. If you will receive direct payments, e.g. a monthly stipend, this will not be listed on your bill and you should plan to pay your bill in advance of receiving payments directly sent to you.

Starting in the summer of your matriculation year you may check your term bill online at:

www.termbill.harvard.edu

You should check your bill often during the year to monitor your billed expenses & payments

SPONSORSHIP ARRANGEMENTS

Some students may receive sponsorship from their home governments or other scholarship providers. Sponsors are normally billed by the Harvard Student Receivables Office and make payments directly to the University on behalf of the recipient student. You should consult the Sponsored Billing section of the Student Receivables Office website at <http://www.termbill.harvard.edu> for more information.

REFUNDS

Should the financial aid credits applied to your billing account exceed your currently billed expenses (tuition, fees, university housing rent, etc.), a refund check will be issued to you to be used for non-billed educational expenses like housing. The Financial Aid Office will automatically calculate refunds and make checks available at the beginning of each term. Refunds from fall financial aid credits will be available after fall registration; refunds from spring financial aid credits will be available after spring classes begin. You should plan to arrive with sufficient funds to cover living expenses through the first month of attendance; please contact the FAO if this presents a financial hardship for you. If your financial aid is increased after the beginning of the semester or if there are adjustments to the term bill resulting in a subsequent credit balance, you may need to initiate the refund process by submitting a refund request form (available from the Financial Aid Office or in the “Financial Aid” section of MyGSE).

Anticipated future charges to a student’s term bill, such as rent, are not taken into consideration in the calculation of refunds. Remember that you are responsible for monitoring your billing account, paying any outstanding balances and repaying any refunds for which you have become ineligible.

TAXATION OF SCHOLARSHIPS AND TAX INFORMATION

Students whose total scholarships, grants, research fellowships, and other forms of gift assistance exceed the cost of tuition, fees, books, and supplies should be aware that the excess amounts may be subject to taxation under current federal tax law. Students with taxable scholarships are responsible for reporting these funds to the Internal Revenue Service. For further information about tax issues, please consult your tax preparer, refer to the Internal Revenue Service Publication 970 “Tax Benefits for Education” or contact the IRS (1-800-829-1040 for questions, 1-800-829-3676 for publications and forms, or on the web at www.irs.gov).

The Financial Aid Office regrets that we are not able to provide advice on issues related to federal tax law.

What If My Enrollment Status Changes?

PART TIME STUDENT STATUS

Changing time status may impact eligibility of the financial aid that has been awarded, therefore you should be fully informed before making this decision. In order to have any financial aid eligibility, you must be enrolled at least half-time (8 credits) per semester. Falling below this level will also impact existing loan deferments, and trigger the grace period on any in-school loans. Please contact the Financial Aid Office if you anticipate a change in your time or enrollment status.

WITHDRAWALS AND LEAVES OF ABSENCE

If you leave school after the start of classes, tuition will be refunded according to the schedule indicated on the academic calendar in the HGSE Catalogue.

If you received federal or state financial aid other than Federal Work Study earnings and then withdraw, a portion of these funds may need to be returned to those programs. The federal financial aid refund policy applies to students who have completed their financial aid files and have received, or are scheduled to receive, federal or state financial aid for the semester in which they withdraw.

The calculation of the return of the Title IV Funds is determined by the date you withdraw, which is:

- The date you began the Harvard Graduate School of Education's withdrawal process;
- The date you officially notified the institution of intent to withdraw;
- The midpoint of the enrollment period if you leave without notifying the institution;
- Your last date of attendance at a documented academically related activity;
- If you do not return from an approved leave of absence, the earlier of the date of the end of the leave of absence or the date you notified HGSE that you will not be returning to the school.

Title IV federal aid and all other aid is defined as "earned" based on the duration of your enrollment at HGSE. The percentage of aid earned is determined by dividing the number of days you were enrolled by the number of days in the semester, up to the 60% point. If you withdraw prior to that 60% point, you may owe back part of your financial aid if the financial aid office determines you have received an amount larger than the earned amount. If you withdraw from all courses after the 60% point in the semester, Title IV aid is viewed as 100% earned and no return of Title IV funds is required. A copy of the worksheet used for this calculation can be requested from the Harvard Graduate School of Education Financial Aid office.

The term "Title IV" includes the following programs:

- Federal Direct Unsubsidized Loans
- Federal Perkins Loans
- Federal Graduate PLUS Loans

In accordance with federal regulations, financial aid funds are returned and allocated in the following order:

1. Federal Direct Unsubsidized Loans
2. Federal Perkins Loans
3. Federal Graduate PLUS Loans

Student Financial Planning- Next Steps

Here are a few suggestions of financial planning steps that will help you before arriving on campus. Some of these recommendations are basic, yet important.

Plan Accordingly: Financially plan for the entire length of your academic career, not just the first year. This will help to minimize your debt burden and help you budget your funds appropriately.

Savings: It is important to accumulate some form of liquid savings prior to coming to campus to cover start-up costs such as moving expenses, apartment security deposits and computer equipment.

Eliminate Debt: You should try to repay all of your consumer debt, such as credit card and automobile debt. The Financial Aid Office is unable to take this type of debt into consideration when formulating individual student budgets. Eliminating credit card and automobile debt also makes it easier to stay within a budget while you are a full-time student.

Organize Prior Educational Debt: You should organize loan and lender information, request deferment papers, and perhaps consider loan consolidation.

Clear Default: If applicable, you should reconcile any credit or default problems before enrolling. In order to be eligible for federal student aid, you must not be in default on any prior student loans. It is possible to resolve a default status and get back on track with payments. Students who need to remedy a defaulted loan should contact their loan servicer to discuss the necessary steps before coming to campus.

MONEY SAVING TIPS FOR HGSE STUDENTS, FROM HGSE STUDENTS

- Pay off your credit cards before you start at HGSE, then limit your credit card use to emergencies only. Be sure to pay them off each month to avoid paying high interest rates. Establish and maintain a strong credit history for the future.
- Don't bring a car unless you absolutely need it. Maintaining a car and parking in Cambridge is expensive and unnecessary. Public transportation is accessible, affordable, and can take you almost anywhere in the Boston area. If you decide to bring a car, the Financial Aid Office cannot increase your budget for this expense. Consider a car share or renting if you absolutely need a vehicle.
- Figure out a monthly budget and stick to it. Spending an extra $10 to $20 per week can add up quickly and you may find yourself running out of money if you don't budget accordingly. Keep accurate, organized records of your finances to help you plan and budget.
- Borrow as little as possible and know the differences between your loans. Not all loans are alike.
- Be realistic about the amount of money you will earn once you graduate.
- If you have been awarded Federal Work Study, be sure to ask your employer for the maximum hourly wage. Employers tend to be flexible about hours.
- Course packs and books are a large expense. Before purchasing books, check the course syllabus to see if the materials are on reserve in Gutman Library. Alternatively, used copies may be available.
- Housing in Harvard Square can be very expensive, thus look for housing in other surrounding communities, such as other Cambridge neighborhoods, or those in Arlington, Boston, Medford, Somerville and Watertown. Also, consider having a roommate. While not an option for everyone, this choice can cut your housing costs significantly. You may also want to look into securing a room in one of the Harvard affiliated dormitories which are reasonably priced. Don't dismiss the idea of living in a dorm too easily, as dorm life has many positive sides.
- Keep up on current information about your student loans and your lenders. There may be opportunities to reduce costs on your loans through offers made through the various loan programs.

Debt Management & Your Credit History

It is important that you have a strong awareness of your debt and credit history in order to manage your financial future. You should be sure that you have a good understanding of your debt load before coming to campus. In addition to keeping track of your debt, it is very important to be aware of your credit history. Individuals establish a credit history by borrowing money or charging retail purchases. Financial institutions and major retail stores report their customer's credit information to national credit bureaus, which, in turn, compile the information in the form of a credit report. A credit report is a record of every credit card, retail account, student and personal loan, and other credit accounts made or established in your name. Establishing and maintaining good credit is important to your financial future.

IDENTITY THEFT

It is important to use proper safeguards to secure your personal information. You should memorize your Social Security number and passwords; do not record passwords on papers you carry with you. Do not use your date of birth as a password. Shred pre-approved credit applications and other financial documents before discarding them. It is important to order credit reports every year from each of the major credit reporting agencies (available free of charge at www.annualcreditreport.com) and review them for accuracy. Never give personal or financial information over the phone or over unsecured internet connections and report lost or stolen cards immediately. Check your monthly credit card and bank statements for unusual activity.

STUDENT DEBT, LOAN FORGIVENESS AND YOUR CAREER PLANS

It is important that you take the time now to familiarize yourself with the loan forgiveness and cancellation provisions that might be available to you in the future. If your career plans align themselves with some of the student loan forgiveness programs, the debt burden you may accumulate could be lessened in time.

Income-Based Repayment (IBR) is a new way to make your federal student loan payments more manageable. If you become a teacher or work in a government or nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization you might qualify for a new type of public service loan forgiveness after 10 years of eligible payments and employment.
